The Resolutions of Virginia are reorganizing for the coming campaign. Could anything more than this prove the necessity for a reduction in the number and frequency of the elections?

STANFORD captains seriously object to preachers as passengers, or white horses as part of the live stock for a voyage. The APPEAL, however, in its ability to weather storms, takes on this notion. It is a dead load of preachers, notwithstanding their cry is "Stop the APPEAL," in other words, muzzle the press, stop free discussion, and compel conformity. But that day is done.

The attempt of the banks of New York to hollow out Congress into a repeal of the three per cent. funding bill will prove a signal failure. Already a syndicate composed of competent parties has offered to take the whole loan. The anti-monopolist, the great banks, the workingmen's party and the community will make a note of this attempt by the money power to defy the law and break down the credit of the government.

The proceedings of the meeting held at the criminal court-room last night will be found very fully reported in another column. To them we direct the attention of our readers, for the present confining ourselves to the hope that there will be no undue haste to enforce the conclusions reached in the resolutions. They are worthy of very careful consideration, and it should not be too slight of heart to say that the resolutions are worth enough alone. The present Taxing-District government has done so well that a very large majority of the better class of citizens would rather see it continued over for another two years. It has initiated a work that is essential to the future of the city, a work that it should be able to carry on to completion. This we trust may be done, whether an election is held or not. It is not just to say that the resolutions were a waste of time, and as Memphis is well crossing a stream, and as Memphis is said to be just now crossing the stream from adversity to prosperity, we think it well that the men who have done so much to lead us to this point should be permitted to lead us until we are fairly landed on the other shore.

On Friday (to-morrow) night Father Ryan, the poet-prince whose lyrics were, during the war, a solace to the soldiers of the south, and whose patriotic example was an inspiration to the people, will deliver a lecture at St. Peter's church for the benefit of the orphans. This simple announcement should not be taken as the offering of a very good or noble church edifice. The orphans appeal constantly to our sympathies, and the high character and attainments of the lecturer are an irresistible attraction. This is Father Ryan's first appearance in Memphis, and it should, independent of the good work which brings him here, be made the occasion of an oration. He is a true priest, a manly man, and a poet of high rank. His life is consecrated to the cause of Christ, but he has never failed to find time from his growing and glorious work to espouse the cause of the people, to take upon himself the burdens of the down-trodden and lead them to use a single line to their welfare in the paths of righteousness. He promises to speak to us on "poetry," no man can do it better. His life has been a poem, his soul is filled with poetry, and his heart beats in unison with the sublime and lofty measures of the poetry of all time. No one who has read the poems of Father Ryan without being sensible of his great power and conviction that he is a man with a mission to speak in verse. His teachings are of the noblest and his heart, however intense, is never far from the heart-searching and true. That his lecture will be interesting there is no room to doubt. There should be as little as the disposition of all classes of our people to make his stay here of interest to him by coming to him in behalf of those who are too young to make an effort for themselves and who are in part the wards of the city.

If there was any such person, we should say the dead had got into the preachers. The telegraph brings us the statement that Mr. Howard Crosby is a very good man in his way, but who is fanatical to a degree involving injury to the temperance question, in the course of an oration on Senator's oration in the University of New York, yesterday morning, made some uncharitable statements in regard to the press of that city. He said that "half a dozen leading editors aimed the common sense of the nation in the hands of the press of that city," and that he agreed with them exactly, but that it would never do for them to support his society for the prevention of crime, for if they "did so a large share of patronage would be taken from their advertising columns." However, the Tribune and two or three other papers, as well as a host of publishing articles from his pen, but most of the papers he charged with as "cardinals as well as laymen" in the press of that city, which he believed to be "a world of evil." He was a religious fanatic, a very strenuous supporter of total abstinence, both in the correspondence and editorial columns, and which denounce him and who differ from them on this question. The editors of both these papers drink every day of their lives. This unparalleled hypocrisy the chancellor called "lying on a grand scale." These papers are not, like the secular press, dependent, in part, on the general grades of society for their patronage, yet they are as big cowards as the most worldly neighbors. This does not sound like a man who set up the ideal that they and the temperance cause, and are invested with some of his inflexible power. Crosby is a fanatic who, instead of making friends for a really good cause, makes enemies, and proves that he cannot practice what he preaches. Nothing could be more impotent than this attack on a paper, compared with the whole pulpit is like a penny whistle to a tornado.
